Cut Scene for Adventure Forty-two:

Time: One week ago
Location: Friendship Park

A tall, good-looking blonde woman is walking a Jack Russell terrier on a leash. They both seem to be really happy, since it's such a beautiful day. The terrier is walking through the park, smelling other dogs, and making "deposits." Everybody that they pass by seems to want to pet him, since he's so cute. The blonde woman doesn't seem to mind the attention at all.

A man walks up to the dog with a bone in his hand. He kneels down, pets the dog lovingly, and asks, "Do you mind if I give him this bone? I'm sure that he'll enjoy it."

"No, that's fine," says the woman, with a slight Australian accent.

The dog chews on the bone for a bit and then bolts out of the park, yanking the leash out of the woman's hand. "Hey, DD come back!" yells the woman, as she runs to follow the dog.

The man walks through the park to a car parked nearby. The car has many different bumper stickers on it. You notice one that says, "I love dogs" and another that says, "Think globally, act locally." One odd one jumps out at you - "Bgmt'lbx Rules!" What an odd name for a band.

Time: 1 hour later
Location: The backyard of Danger Man's former townhouse.

While the Jack Russell terrier is busy digging a hole to place the bone into, the blonde woman runs up to the townhouse. She grabs the leash, just as the dog is finishing his work.

"Why on earth did you do that, DD?" she asks. "That's a BAD DOG!" The dog gives her a shamed look.

"Wait a minute! Why did you come here? You've never been here before." The dog gives her a confused look.

"Oh well, I guess it's just one of those weird dog things. At least you didn't dig up the previous DD's. I would have hated to re-bury all of them. Come on, DD, let's go home."